

dust bunny

the peeling window framed an eclipse; not of the moon but of the moths and i was still too foolish to be unafraid swatting away the fortune of chance: sweeping past sundown, purse

on the floor, moving

far too fast right
in my own way